Peotone Man Found Dead In Bed

Irvin Krapf, 29, Peotone township farmer and father of two children, was found dead in bed at his home about 8 o'clock Wednesday morning with a wound in his chest.

A 12 gauge double barrel shotgun was found beside his body, according to Dr. E. A. Kingston, county coroner, and Deputy sheriffs Ben Suva and George Millward. They reported that Krapf, who had been suffering with undulant fever for the past six years apparently had pulled the trigger with his toe. A flashlight was found beside the body also.

The body was found by a 20 year old farmhand, Elvis Gast, when he went into Krapf's bedroom when the farmer failed to appear that morning. Gast told authorities the shooting must have occurred between 6 and 11:30 p. m. Tuesday. Gast said he left the house about 6 p. m. and that Krapf appeared to be in good spirits at that time. Gast said he returned home at 11:30 and went directly to his room. He heard no shots during the night, he told authorities.

The two men were staying at the house alone. Krapf's wife, Esther 27, is in Silver Cross hospital where she gave birth to a son last Saturday.

Other than his widow and son, he is survived by a four year old daughter, Sharon; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Krapf of Peotone township, two sisters, Mrs. Ruth Copman and Miss Esther Krapf at home. Mr. Krapf was a native of Will County and had lived his entire life in the vicinity of Peotone and Manhattan. He was living on a farm three miles south and four miles east of Manhattan.

Nearly 200 people turned out at the incorporating meeting in New Lenox Wednesday night.

Carlton Cole, the principal speaker explained that incorporation would bring in $3000 annually from liquor license, utilities and gasoline tax. Attorney Hinton Massey of Joliet and Everett Cooper Mayor of Mokena, revealed that all of their paved and black top roads were paid for from the gasoline tax, which New Lenox does not receive. George Sangmeister, Mayor of Frankfort explained how impossible it is for graft in a small community where six aldermen watch each other critically.

George Koehler, the moderator, did an excellent job of keeping the discussion on a high plane.

Petitions for an election were passed thru the aisles by Ernest Rydberg, Geo. Stockley, Arthur Rowsell and Leo Eligner so as to get the necessary two thirds of signatures. There was also a call for members to help back the incorporation and Harvey Erick, Secretary reports that $37 was collected.

NO PLAN FOR ARMY

WASHINGTON. — After the last war, we let our best officers leave the army, were content to make the army a refuge for hundreds of misfits who couldn't adjust themselves in other walks of life, and settled down to complete complacency regarding the armed forces.

Usually history repeats itself. After this war, however, there is a little less complacency regarding the future — thanks to Russia. But there is almost as much do-nothingness regarding the internal organization of the army.

President Truman has now demanded that we have a big peacetime conscript army. But aside from Secretary of War Patterson's healthy board for probing caste, no steps have been taken to reorganize the army's long out-dated system of promotions, its methods of selecting officers, and, perhaps most important of all, its system of eliminating misfits.

A thorough re-organization of the army might make it more enticing to good men and thereby eliminate conscription. Even Sen. Chan Gurney of South Dakota, most ardent conscription enthusiast, will admit that a volunteer army is more efficient than one composed of men who are forced to serve.

COULD USE HORSE MEAT

An important debate has been taking place among food experts inside the administration regarding the use of horse meat for feeding Europe.

Horse meat is a type of food which Americans know little about. Within Europe it is standard diet and certain countries, especially France and Belgium, have repeatedly informed the United States that they would like to buy more horse meat here. If two and a half billion pounds of horse meat could be sold to Europe — which is the amount available in the U. S. A.—it would take care of most of Europe's feeding problems and eliminate any need for U. S. A. rationing.

Such a program has been urged by UNRRA officials and also by some experts in the army and navy. However, the plan has run up against several snags, chiefly that of U. S. meat packers.

The big packers don't want the American public to get the idea that horse meat is processed in their plants. They fear that the suspicion would linger in the consumer's mind. However, Harry Reed, who does most of the meat procurement for UNRRA in the department of agriculture, leans toward the big meat packers and they never have wanted small state packers to get into the inter-state business.

HORSE MEAT FEEDS ZOOS

Another source of opposition is expected to come from the many horse lovers throughout the country who probably would claim that the United States was being denuded of horses.

Officials point out, however, that several hundred horses are slaughtered weekly all over the United States to feed the zoos of the nation. Furthermore, the United States today has a larger surplus of horses than ever before in history. Agriculture department estimates are that three million surplus horses are now on the ranges and farms of the country. The grain which they alone consume would go a long way toward feeding Europe.

Officials estimate that these three million surplus horses would supply a total of two and a half billion pounds of meat, also give fats for soap, together with hides to ease the scarcity of leather.

NOTE—While prices of almost everything tended upward during the war, the price of horses did not. Government buyers purchasing draft animals for UNRRA report that the country has thousands of four to six-year-old horses which have never been harnessed. Farmers haven't had time to break them in, would like to sell them if prices were right.

SEARCH OF TITLE . . . Billy Conn, Pittsburgh Adonis, who hopes to wrest the world's heavyweight boxing crown from Champion Joe Louis, when they meet in New York in June.

WILL the coming Louis-Conn fight set a new record for gate receipts? There are more than two or three close to the fight game who don't think so. It will be a sellout, but the idea is that the Yankee Stadium can't match either Soldier Field, Chicago, or the Sesquiennial in Philadelphia.

Here's the low down from a gate receipts authority: "Mike Jacobs will charge $100 for ringside seats. He will scale the crowd down from that. I believe you will find the attendance somewhere between 90,000 and 100,000. My guess would be around $2,500,000, slightly below the second Tunney-Dempsey meeting in Chicago which drew $2,650,000." Jacobs boasts that he will gross three million dollars on this fight.

This sent us prowling into the record book to check the leading money records of the game. Here they are:

Tunney-Dempsey, Chicago, 1927—$2,650,000.
Dempsey - Tunney, Philadelphia, 1926—$1,895,723.
Dempsey-Carpentier, Jersey City, 1921—$1,626,580.
Dempsey-Sharkey, New York, 1927—$1,083,529.
Dempsey-Firpo, New York, 1923—$1,082,590.
Louis-Baer, New York, 1935—$948,352.
Louis-Schmeling, New York, 1938—$940,096.
Tunney-Heeney, New York, 1928—$691,014.

The first Louis-Conn fight in New York, 1941, drew only $451,743. There are two outstanding points in this financial roundup. The first is that Jack Dempsey figured in all the shows over $1,000,000, five altogether. These five Dempsey fights hauled in $8,338,422.

Dempsey altogether drew in something like $10,000,000 at the gate, far beyond any one else. It will also be noted that Dempsey drew huge amounts against four different opponents—Tunney, Carpentier, Sharkey and Firpo. Gene Tunney, with Dempsey out of the picture fell from $2,650,000 and $1,895,723 to $691,014 against Tom Heeney.

Dempsey altogether drew in something like $10,000,000 at the gate, far beyond any one else. It will also be noted that Dempsey drew huge amounts against four different opponents—Tunney, Carpentier, Sharkey and Firpo. Gene Tunney, with Dempsey out of the picture fell from $2,650,000 and $1,895,723 to $691,014 against Tom Heeney.

The first Louis-Conn fight in New York, 1941, drew only $451,743. There are two outstanding points in this financial roundup. The first is that Jack Dempsey figured in all the shows over $1,000,000, five altogether. These five Dempsey fights hauled in $8,338,422.

W. N. U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Sherwin saw Stenhart riding on the trail below, and his arms ached to catch the rascal and tie him up in the cave. Or he could push him over the cliff. Jane suddenly appeared before him. "Tell me it isn't true," she urged. She did not know that Stenhart was following her until Sherwin told her. "I am innocent of that crime," he told her, taking her into his arms. At the ranch Jim asks about Jane and learns from Stenhart, who has returned, that she is up on the mountainside with Sherwin. Stenhart tells that he saw Jane and Sherwin making love. Jim is furious and calls the sheriff, but learns the sheriff is on the way over looking for Jordan. Stenhart rides off to guide the sheriff.

CHAPTER IX

It occurred to him that it would be terrible to have the sheriff find Jane with this man. He drummed with his fingers on the edge of his desk, his face white. He had just telephoned to the stables for his horse when a door opened and old Teresa came toward him, a paper in her hand. Jim looked around impatiently.

"You'll read this for me, senor?" The little brown woman thrust the paper in his hand.

It was the picture of Sherwin; below it was printed a description of the crime. Jim frowned.

"This isn't pleasant reading, Teresa, and it wouldn't interest you!"

She caught at his sleeve. "Read it, senor!" she begged.

Half annoyed, Jim complied.

"Madre de Dios, it's as he said!" she mumbled, her eyes dilated. "He's got a devil!"

The old woman caught at his sleeve, pointing. Through the open door she could glimpse Stenhart's disappearing figure, high up the road.

"He's got a devil!" she mumbled, crossing herself. Then she caught at his coat and clung to it, keeping him from the door. "Madre de Dios, don't let Jane marry heem, senor!" she begged.

Jim, tried to the limit, shook her off. "Oh, mind your own business, Teresa!" he growled.

She covered her face with her shaking hands and he heard her praying Spanish as he ran down the slope. He must get to Jane before Stenhart unleashed the sheriff's gang! He was honestly worried. Second thought had cooled his rage; he remembered that he owed something to this fugitive that he was hounding. Then he saw his sister. She had just swung herself from the saddle down by the stables, and as she turned he saw how pale she was. Jane had never looked like this!

"The devil take that fellow!" Jim muttered to himself, wrathful again. Then he spoke sharply. "Where have you been?"

Jane took no notice of his tone. She came up, panting.

"What's the matter?" she gasped. "Perhaps you know better than I do," he replied ironically.

Jane caught at his arm with shaking hands. "What does it mean? I saw Stenhart meet the sheriff on the upper road—tell me quick, quick!"

Jim eyed her coldly. "I phoned for Cutler. He's going to take that jailbird, Sherwin, back to Rhode Island, and I'm going to help him, that's all!"

Jane's hand dropped from his arm. She turned deathly white, and for a moment she swayed on her feet. Jim threw an arm around her.

"My God, Jane, you don't care for a murderer?"

She pushed him away from her with both hands. "He saved your life and you've betrayed him—you Judas!" she cried.

"Jane—" he tried to restrain her but she broke away, ran back to her horse and leaped into the saddle. Jim made an ineffectual snatch for the reins. "Where are you going, you mad woman?" he shouted at her.

She turned and looked back at him, haggard and broken. "I'm going to warn him—something dreadful will happen if he meets Stenhart!"

"Stop—wait, I'm coming!" Jim cried, but she was gone at a gallop.

Her brother turned and shouted for his horse. Jose had saddled it and Jim flung himself into the saddle and was off in an instant. Jane was well in the lead, riding recklessly, but Tex was tired; Jim's horse was fresh and the distance between them grew less and less as he reached the bridge, crossed it, and raced on. He could see now, as he turned the loop, that Stenhart had met Cutler on the upper road; they were far ahead. The posse had divided, too, and, as Jim rode on, he made out their plan; they meant to cut Sherwin off, pen him on the hillside, and then beat the bushes.

If Jane reached his hiding-place first, if she knew of some secret trail, she would be trapped with him! The blood rushed to Jim's face at the thought; he cursed his folly for giving Stenhart this chance. "He's mad with jealousy!" he thought, and urged his horse.

But Jane was still ahead and she had taken an unexpected turn to the right. Jim remembered that he did not know where the man was hidden. But Stenhart did, he had tracked her, and Stenhart was going toward the cataract when he glimpsed him last through the trees. On the upper road they traveled faster, Cutler and Stenhart, turning a sharp curve between two wooded spurs. The trees below them hid the brother and sister as they galloped past the creek, and there was a long piece of virgin forest where they could see nothing either way, and the voice of the cataract deadened all other sounds.

Here and there was a glimpse of the wild ravine, but Jim had never seen Mac's little cabin and, as yet, he saw no trail; then he observed Jane reining in her horse, looking up. Could she see anything? He struck his spurs into his own horse and the animal bounded forward. They had come to a sharp curve and Jane, trying to turn aside, lost her chance to escape. Jim's horse, faster than hers, leaped a fallen tree and her brother snatched at Tex's bridle and brought him to a standstill.

Jane struck at his hand with her quirt. "Let me go!" she cried fiercely; "I've got to go up that trail!"

She was pointing with a shaking

Then, as the man he had hunted neither moved nor spoke, he tottered back, stumbled, and fell headlong over the narrow ledge.

hand at an opening in the brush, until now unseen.

"I swear you won't!" Jim flung back, red in the face; "you're my sister."

The girl struggled, trying to free herself, and both horses plunged. Then, suddenly, she gave a little cry, looking up through the trees. The horses had whirled around the curve and faced the cataract; through widespread branches Jim caught a glimpse of the trail along the ledge, above the precipice, a trail he had never followed, never even seen before.

"I'm too late—oh, God, I'm too late!" Jane moaned, dropping the reins into Jim's hands and clasping her own against her breast.

The white agony of her face smote her brother; in a tumult of feeling, anger and regret, he held the horses steady and tried to follow her eyes. At first, in the broad glare of the sunlight on the high hills, he saw nothing but the white spray of the cataract and the mighty tree-trunks that seemed to rise upward in serried ranks, like an army. He could not even hear voices above the roar of the water, but he knew that Cutler's men were behind them and before them, creeping up the mountainside, stealthy and sure, upon their quarry, as the hunter steals upon his game. Suddenly his heart failed him—he felt he had done a thing that he might well regret. No matter if the man was a convict, he had no reason to hunt him down; rather, indeed, he had cause to spare him. Jim's face sobered and grew pale. Then Jane flung herself from the saddle and started toward the screened opening of the trail, but, though she was quick, Jim was quicker; he was down in a moment and after her. He caught her and held her, struggling, in his arms.

"You're too late, Jane!" he exclaimed hoarsely. "Don't you see? I do! They're bound to meet—look!"

He had glimpsed the steep side of the precipice at last, and seen what his sister had been watching. Sherwin was standing beside a cliff, high on the trail. Below him, two hundred feet, dashed the cataract; along the narrow, dizzy ledge, as yet unaware of him, came Stenhart—alone! Cautiously, searching, peering this way and that, unaware that his quarry saw him, waited for him. Those two alone and the chasm at their feet—Fate, that mocking siren, had staged the scene for murder; the wild torrent below flung up its mad spray with a shout.

Jane, looking up now, saw that she could not reach Sherwin, could not even cry out to him. She knew of the cave—he had told her of it—as a way to escape; a warning in time and they would never find him, could not trap him, but she was too late; Stenhart would see him, Stenhart would betray him! She had fought with Jim, but now she stood still with her brother's arms about her; he could feel her shake from head to foot as she looked up at the two men alone there, on the edge of eternity. The climax had come; they were face to face to fight it out, no one could reach them in time!

Stenhart, moving cautiously, foot by foot, peering, listening, looking back for help—help that would never reach him! Sherwin waiting.

Jim caught his breath. A cloud had obscured the sun, and as it sailed away he saw Sherwin's face as he crouched, leaning forward, ready! One thrust and Stenhart—coming on, unaware of him—would go down—down.

Jane covered her face with her hands, but it was Jim who cried out hoarsely, tried to shout a warning; then, realizing its futility, he groaned aloud.

"Good God, he's going to kill him!" he cried.

Sherwin had stepped out from his hiding-place; he seemed to tower, vengeance incarnate. Stenhart stood still an instant, frozen in his tracks. His drawn pistol fell from his hand; he seemed to shrink together in mortal terror. Then, as the man he had hunted neither moved nor spoke, he tottered back, stumbled and fell headlong over the narrow ledge.

It had happened in an instant, in the twinkling of an eye. Sherwin, waiting for his betrayer, saw him—untouched, unscathed—crumple up, reel backward and plunge over the edge of the precipice. So swift was it, that he neither moved nor spoke; for a full minute he stared blankly at the spot where Stenhart had disappeared. A strange sensation swept him, he grew dizzy himself; his head swam, and the hills seemed to rise up about him in awful majesty. He knew nothing of the men who were creeping toward him through the woods; he believed himself alone, alone with that awful power which had seized his enemy and brushed him like a fly from the ledge! Slowly he took a step forward and, steadying himself, looked over the brink. Thirty feet below him that solitary stunted tree thrust out its dwarfed trunk from the sheer side of the precipice. Sprawled across it, limp, motionless, lifeless, hung Stenhart. The white froth of the boiling torrent below him outlined his sprawling limbs, his hanging head, his ghastly upturned face.

He was not dead! Even as Sherwin looked, he saw him move his head in the torture of pain and fear; it was more terrible than a swift wiping out of life, for death was playing a game of hide and seek with him. A movement, almost a breath, and he would go down into eternity, and if he hung there—with no mortal help at hand—he must perish thus! It could not be for long, but Sherwin, looking down at him, knew that he was conscious and saw no help, only the face of the man who had sworn to kill him! Revenge exquisite in his torments, was accomplished. Sherwin need not stand there and see him die! Even as he looked, he saw the old tree begin to waver under the dead weight of the fallen body; its roots were loosening in their age-old crevice of rock. In a little while, long before help could reach Stenhart, it would bend downward. Annihilation waited there, eternity yawned for him, and he knew it!

Sherwin, grasping a ledge of rock to steady himself, looked down at the helpless man who had betrayed him. Stenhart, looking up dizzily, saw him and tried to lift a feeble hand in entreaty. It was beyond his strength. He hung there, feeling the tree sway beneath him, helpless, at the end of hope.

Sherwin straightened himself suddenly; he had heard a distant sound, voices in the woods! Instantly, he divined the truth; Stenhart had again betrayed him, they were after him. But he had ample time to reach his cave, and once there they would not get him, for he knew the other opening and it was safe. Nor could they save Stenhart; the tree was giving! Five minutes more—and he would be avenged! He need not stir a finger, and Jane, who had besought him not to slay, would know that there was no blood upon his hands!

He drew a deep breath; almost at his feet lay the coil of rope that he had dropped when he met Jane. He saw it and remembered the purpose he had had in mind. The minutes seemed to beat themselves into his brain, his pulses throbbed, his lips were parched. He stooped, reached for the rope and, uncoiling it, wound it about the great trunk of a sycamore, then, tossing the long end over the side of the abyss, he grasped it and began to descend, hand over hand.

The rope swung out and then went taut with his weight. Little by little he lowered himself and, as he went down, he glanced aside at the tree under Stenhart. It was yielding, one crack more in the straining bark and it would snap! Swinging at the rope's end in space, Sherwin, the avenger, risked his life.

DECISIVE MOMENTS IN PETER'S LIFE

LESSON TEXT—John 1:42; Mark 8:27-29; Luke 22:34-37, 61, 62; John 21:15-17.
MEMORY SELECTION—We ought to obey God rather than men.—Acts 5:29.

Men are of primary interest to God. Our Lord Jesus has always been concerned about men, eager that they should be filled with all the fullness of His love and the beauty of His grace. He it is who stands by in the hour of weakness and failure to give renewed strength to His repentant child.

The life of Peter runs the gamut of human feelings from the height of joy and assurance to the depth of despair. He learned many of his lessons the hard way—by a stubborn struggle in the school of experience—but he came out into a glorious and triumphant faith in Christ.

I. A New Name and a Great Confession (John 1:42; Mark 8:27-29).

When a man comes to Jesus in true faith and devotion he becomes a changed man. The Bible speaks of it as a new birth, a radical change from darkness to light, a going from death to life.

A name is important in its bearing on the individual's life. How often parents hinder or embarrass a child with an unworthy name, or a foolish imitation of the name of some giddy individual in the public eye, but lacking real character.

Simon, which means "hearing" was completed by the name Peter meaning "rock," a token of this change of direction of life. The Lord gave it to him, and He knew all about the man, his past, present and future, the longings of his heart which were to be fulfilled in service for Him.

The great confession of Christ (Mark 8), which became the foundation of the church (see Matt. 16:16), was the expression of the heart of this spiritually changed man.

"Thou art the Christ!" Such is the conviction and confession of the man or woman with the reborn life!

II. An Awful Failure and a Deep Repentance (Luke 22:54-57, 61, 62).

Peter had vaunted himself in declaring his everlasting loyalty to the Lord. His old self-satisfaction and boastfulness had overcome him. He had even come to the place where he felt capable of telling the Lord that He was mistaken.

He made the grave mistake of following the Lord "afar off" (v. 54). He did not intend to deny the Lord, but he had allowed himself to get into a position where it was hard to stand up for Him.

The lesson for us is evident. If we want our faith to be steady and true in the hour of the enemy's attack we must not get far from the Lord, nor may we find our fellowship with this Christ-denying world.

Peter's strong denial of our Lord, his use of language unbecoming to a believer, his quick falsehoods—all these mark the thing he did for what he knew it to be when he heard the cock crow—a terrible sin against the Christ.

The look of Jesus doubtless carried conviction, but one somehow feels that it was even more a look of tenderness and of assurance of the Lord's promised prayers for him.

The thing which brought the tears of repentance was the remembrance of the Lord's own words (v. 61). It is the recollection of the Word of God which brings a man to his senses spiritually.

Peter's repentance was real. So we find that Peter was restored and reinstated in his place of service for the Lord.

III. A Complete Restoration and an Obedient Service (John 21:15-17).

Jesus met Peter on the first Easter morning, so he was assured of forgiveness. But Peter and the others had returned to their old life as fishermen. They seem to have lost their vision, or had become discouraged.

But the Lord had not forgotten them. He appeared and told them where to catch fish, and then we have the lovely scene around the fire as they breakfasted together.

There it was that the Lord met Peter, and as he had denied Christ thrice he is asked to thrice declare his devotion to Him. He is standing by Christ's fire now. There is no hesitancy and no uncertainty in his witness now.

The man who thus declared his readiness to serve Christ to the end had many an opportunity to prove the sincerity of that profession. He met persecution and imprisonment, but to every effort of man to close his mouth or to change his witness he had the simple reply of absolute obedience to the Lord.

Tradition tells us that this faithfulness finally led Peter to a martyr's death, but he was ready even for that. So we see a life made over, made powerful, made glorious for God through the matchless grace of our Lord Jesus Christ. He can do it for you, too. Will you let Him?

HOUSEHOLD PRINTS

Place a well equipped shoe shine kit where your family will see it and be tempted to use it to prolong the life of their shoes.

Add a little borax when making starch to give a gloss to articles when ironed. After starch is made, stir in a little cold water to prevent formation of "scum" on top.

A good sprinkling space for dampening clothes can be made by placing a discarded piece of oil cloth over the ironing board.

Your dinner napkins will last longer if you fold them in quarters at one ironing and in thirds at the next, thus alternating each time.

If a turkish towel has been cut—not torn—mend it with a bit of net. Place the net, bring the edges of the cut together, and machine stitch back and forth across until no hole remains. Makes a neat job and prolongs the life of the towel.

What's Enough?

By GEORGE S. BENSON

President of Harding College

Searcy, Arkansas

WHAT will John Q. Public pay for what he wants. He will pay every cent he thinks it is worth to him. Ultimately he will be willing to pay more, if he finds out the item is worth more than he first thought. On the other hand he will kick at the price and refuse to pay it as soon as he finds out the thing is worth less to him than the money he paid for it.

These statements are so plain and simple that any schoolboy is able to understand them. You would hardly think anybody could get these facts mixed-up, but they do. Under them is hid the 1946 labor-management problem which is the most serious one that ever confronted this nation. What lies behind all the headlines telling about strikes?

Idea BRIEFLY, union laborers are asking their employers for more pay—more wages than the employers (for some reason) are willing to lay out. All trades, especially farmers, want laborers to draw high wages because that's the key to good times. Farmers enjoy good markets when labor prospers. Why not pay working men whatever they ask?

Answer: The workers' wages, just like the owner's profits, come out of what John Q. Public will pay for what he wants. If the price is too steep for John, then there's no sale and no profits and presently no wages. If the price is reasonable, John buys. That makes profits and wages. It makes better jobs and more of them, and prosperity.

Higher IN MOST cases, when Wages wages advance prices must advance also to cover the expense. There is no other way to raise wages except by boosting prices unless the prices already in force are fictitious and unfair, something competition seldom permits. Customers object to wage increases only when they call for price increases to cover them. But even then, Mr. Public is not always right.

Many a wage increase is sound even when prices have to be raised immediately to cover them. Raising prices to pay better wages is good business, up to a point. But what point? Up to the point that John Q. Public quits buying. So long as volume stays large, the price is sound. When volume drops off and prices are boosted to pay for the blunder, that's unsound.

There are experts in every business who estimate accurately how many of this-or-that will sell for some stipulated price. They know long before the first one is made. This year, when steady jobs at good pay are so vital, prices should be set in advance to get volume sales and make jobs. Labor, as well as industry, should be interested in the right prices.

MORE RURAL TELEPHONES

ARE ON THE WAY

We know what the telephone means to rural families—how much it is needed to help produce and market crops—keep in touch with friends—get help in emergencies.

That is why we are moving rapidly ahead on our $3,000,000 program to extend and improve rural telephone service.

It will take time, of course, to give telephone service to every one who wants it. It will take time to install all the switchboards and build all the lines that are needed. But many new developments are helping.

It's a big job, but we are turning our efforts back to civilian service just as fast as we turned them to the instant needs of war.

New Building

Officials of the Illinois Agricultural Association, state Farm Bureau organization, today announced that the Association has purchased for cash an office building located north of the River, convenient to the Chicago Loop, to house the IAA and 12 of its statewide associated cooperative companies.

The IAA is the largest state farm organization in the United States, having 124,000 Farm Bureau members in Illinois.

The building purchased is located at 43 East Ohio St. It is a 12 story, modern, fireproof structure of Indiana limestone exterior and granite base with a ground area of 100 by 100 feet. Known as The American Bankers Building, it was built in 1929-30. The building is 100 percent rented and delivery is subject to leases contracted by the former owners, the Rockford Life Insurance Co. The IAA and associated companies, therefore, are not expected to move into the building immediately.

At the present time, the IAA and associated companies are occupying three full floors and parts of 10 other floors in the Transportation Building at 605 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

The new building at the corner of Ohio and Wabash will provide 82,000 square feet of rentable space on the 12 floors of the building.

The move to acquire new office quarters has been accentuated during the past few years by the steady growth of the IAA and associated companies. In 1921, the IAA leased 5050 square feet of office space in the Transportation Building. Today, the IAA and associated companies occupy 56,190 square feet of office space and 7,665 square feet of storage space. Employees in 1920 numbered 54. Today, approximately 425 persons are employed in the Chicago office.

Associated companies of the IAA, all statewide cooperatives, which today have offices in the Transportation Building and which will be moved to the new building when its occupancy permits, are: County Life Insurance Company, Country Mutual Fire Company, County Mutual Casualty Co., Illinois Agricultural Auditing Assoc., Illinois Farm Supply Co., Illinois Co-op Locker Service, Illinois Farm Bureau Serum Assoc., Illinois Grain Corp., Illinois Livestock Marketing Assoc., Illinois Milk Producers' Association, Prairie Farms Creameries and Illinois Wool Marketing Association. Another IAA associated company, the Illinois Fruit Growers Exchange, has its headquarters at Carbondale. All of these cooperatives are owned and controlled by Illinois Farm Bureau members.

Campaign For Funds
Of Cancer Control

Local citizens will join in an all out intensified effort to further combat the death toll of cancer as part of a national campaign to raise $12,000,000 for greater control of the dread disease. The Illinois quota is $909,480.

The American Cancer Society, 33-year old organization which has spearheaded national activities in research, education and service to cancer patients, has set up campaign headquarters for the drive in Illinois at 20 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago, 4, Ill.

One in every eight residents of this area is asked to serve as a volunteer in the campaign for funds. The "one in eight" ratio was established in view of the fact that this is the percentage of victims of cancer on an average nationally.

This year, a novel and simple method of contributing to the campaign has been affected. All that is necessary to contribute is to address an envelope to "Cancer", insert the contribution and mail. Through arrangement with the post office department such mail is delivered automatically to the bank in Chicago acting as depository for the American Cancer Society funds in this area.

While statistics on the toll taken yearly by cancer are discouraging, constantly increasing efforts such as the present fund raising campaign give hope that substantial progress can be made in controlling the disease. These three vital things must be done, and will be given further impetus through adequate funds: 1. Provide far more and much better facilities for the diagnosis and treatment of cancer; 2. Expand widely the scientific research attack which will lead to more effective treatment and possibly even the elimination of cancer and 3. Spread knowledge everywhere of the danger signals of cancer and urge people to consult a doctor in time to be saved.

Cancer took the lives of 607,000 Americans, more than twice as many Americans as were killed or listed missing in action in World War II from Pearl Harbor to VJ Day. Cancer is killing Americans at the rate of 175,000 every year, 478 every day, 20 every hour, 1 every 3 minutes.

Another startling fact in the cancer statistics is that of the death rate among children. Cancer kills more children between 5 and 20 than diphtheria, measles, infantile paralysis, typhoid fever, scarlet fever and whooping cough combined!

Stinson Airport. During the flight to Stinson, Johnny Kenniston, my passenger, (just recovering from an operation) and myself both kept our eyes "peeled" for Municipal Airport Traffic, but couldn't help sneaking a few glances at the Lake at our right. From the air, it was a streak of magnificent blue. Stinson located north of the Canal has of all things, a mosquito abatement ditch that runs the full East-West length of the field, except for a North-South runway. In the flight office, N. J. Brown, a private pilot, was officiating for General Manager and Instructor Norman Medals. Brown explained that the field caters to airplane owners. Stinson changed hands March 10th, from Mid West Flying Service to LaGrange Aviation Company and is aiming high for service and cleanliness.

Despite reports to the contrary, the G. I. school at Stinson is not yet in operation. It will be opening by or before the first of July. The line boy who propped our ship is a GI waiting for school by working on the field.

Chicago is beginning to Wake Up to the need of more hangar space for the planes of men who want to fly into Chicago on business. Now they're landing as far away as Fox River Valley and commuting. An on the scene radio program with announcer Quin Ryan presiding, will be billed as Chicago, World Airport! Col. Phil Cochran, even more famous as Flip Corkin of Terry and the Pirates, is another vet organizing an air freight line. The pot of gold is at the beginning of the Rainbow! American Airlines just purchased 20 Transport planes, called Republic Rainbows for a twenty two million dollars. They'll travel coast to coast in 6 hours, 45 minutes. Republic sold $400,000 worth of Seabees at the National Aviation show held in New York's Grand Central Palace.

The fire at Harlem Airport was the third this year. Stop & Shop advertises Live Maine Lobsters flown in from the Atlantic. mmm. A wing dip to the 72 American Alirmen, who, rescued during the war by General Draja Mihailovitch are now offering their services and testimony in a fight to get him a public trial from Russia.

Banana Surprise! Driving back from the airport last Saturday, I spotted some luscious fruit at a 130th and Indiana Ave., fruit stand. I stopped and learned from George Dremom, whose folks own the stand, that he recently returned after five years with the 14th Air Force. Under Major General Claire Chennault in China he was Capt. George Dremom, an Ace with a score of 9 enemy planes.

He plans to hanger his own P-38 Lightning plane at Chicago-Hammond Airport beginning next month.

Service Ala War! Flying into Chicago Heights Airport last Saturday, I find some Sky high news for every pilot. A group of eight veterans, headed by Bud Moes are believed to be the first group of their kind in the country. They have all the equipment jacks, portable power, lights, everything necessary to completely service any plane from a C54 on down. And they are on call 24 hours a day, will travel anywhere. As mechanics in the air forces they learned how to always under any conditions, get the job done.

Uncle Sam Says

This lad in the coal mines near Wilkes Barre, Pa., buys a Savings Bond every month because he is going to be married. "I've seen plenty of sickness and layoffs in my time," says Joe. "I've $375.00 in War and Victory Bonds now. Ten years from now 25 bucks a month coming in. Imagine what that will mean to Irma and me, and maybe a couple of kids, specially if these diggings should be shut up for a while."

U. S. Treasury Department

Uncle Sam Says

Vermont winters stir red blood and thrift among the residents of a state which contributed so much to the birth of independence in our country. That's why Savings Bonds are popular. Sugar from the maples is no sweeter than the strong boxes with War, Victory and Savings Bonds. Vermonters invested $29,000,000 in the Victory Loan and will invest more in Savings Bonds for new barns, plows, trucks in years to come.

U. S. Treasury Department

Uncle Sam Says

Down in Broad Street and Nassau Street, New York, I talked with big finance men. They could buy big, long term bonds but they buy Savings Bonds like Joe, the miner, and Hal, the bus driver. They look ahead and see them meeting doctor's bills, putting a new roof on the garage and getting that wing chair mother has always wanted. Yes, Wall Street likes bonds.

U. S. Treasury Department

Teach Swimming

An appalling number of lives were lost during the first part of World War II because many servicemen of the warring nations did not know how to swim. As a result, efforts have been made in several countries to introduce compulsory swimming courses in all schools and colleges.

Colorful Eruption

The two-day eruption of the volcano Krakatoa, Netherlands Indies, 1883, was so violent that actual sounds of the explosion were heard nearly 3,000 miles away. This distance is the greatest at which sound waves have ever been perceived. Dust, stones and ashes were shot up into the air more than 17 miles, and a remarkable series of red sunsets appeared all over the world, caused by the spread of fine volcanic dust through the atmosphere.

Tomato Juice

Tomato juice may be substituted measure for measure, for tomatoes in soups, sauces, or baked dishes. When using commercial tomato juices, be sure to examine the label to see if spices have been added before you add more seasoning. A dish made with tomato juice will not have quite the same color as a dish made with tomatoes. The color will usually be more of a light orange shade than the bright red of tomatoes.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 21, was:

"DOCTRINE OF ATONEMENT"
The Golden Text was:

"If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous; and he is the propitiation for our sins; and not for our's only, but also for the sins of the whole world" (1 John 2: 1, 2).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead... Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, . . . Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you . . . that your faith and hope might be in God" (1 Peter 1).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"We acknowledge Jesus' atonement as the evidence of divine, efficacious Love, unfolding man's unity with God through Christ Jesus the Way-shower; and we acknowledge that man is saved through Christ, through Truth, Life, and Love as demonstrated by the Galilean Prophet in healing the sick and overcoming sin and death . . . The atonement is a hard problem in theology, but its scientific explanation is, that suffering is an error of sinful sense which Truth destroys, and that eventually both sin and suffering will fall at the feet of everlasting Love" (pp. 497, 23).

TO EVERY CHRISTIAN the symbol of the cross ultimately brings comfort and peace to minds disturbed by uncertainty and change.

Giant Bearings

The navy's mighty 16-inch battleship rifles obtain their ease of mobility from the giant ball and roller bearings on which the gun turrets are mounted. A single roller in one of these bearings, of which there are often a dozen or more, weighs 770 pounds.

Bituminous Coal Mines Make New Safety Record

HAVACO, W. VA. — Bituminous coal mines in the United States made a new all-time safety record in 1945 when the number of accidental deaths per million tons mined dropped approximately to 1.6—less than half the rate 20 years ago. The Bituminous Coal Institute points out that millions of dollars spent by the companies for new mechanical installations and improvements were an important factor in making this record possible.

Pictured above is a giant motor operating a huge fan which saved many lives when a recent mine explosion occurred here. This fan, exhausting 450,000 cubic feet of air per minute, through an extra air-shaft, recently installed, kept the air pure while 250 miners reached a special escape shaft and came up from the mine. Casualties were thus limited to those in the immediate vicinity of the explosion. Inspecting the life-saving machinery are Safety Engineer C. L. Wilson and Mine Inspector J. L. Gilley.

Pint of Peaches Yields Three Desserts

WITH wise planning, one pint of peaches can go a long way, writes the Country Cooking Editor of nationally circulated Capper's Farmer. The above picture proves her statement, for there's a pie, a salad and an upside down pudding, all rich with peaches—all the product of one pint of fruit.

Peach Patsys

¾ c. flour
2 tbsp. sugar
2 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
2 tbsp. shortening

¼ c. whole bran
½ c. milk
1 large peach half
¼ c. peach juice

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening. Soak bran in milk 5 minutes; add to dry ingredients, stirring only until combined. Slice peach half, and place slices in bottom of 4 greased muffin cups or ramekins. Add 1 tbsp. peach juice to each cup, and cover each with heaping tablespoon of batter. Bake in moderately hot oven (400. F.) 15 minutes.

Cheese-Peach Salad

2 c. cottage cheese
¼ c. orange juice
½ c. mayonnaise
8 peach halves

Mix cheese, orange juice and mayonnaise and shape in a mound on plate. Arrange thinly sliced peaches over the top in decorative fashion. Serve with mayonnaise or French dressing.

Peach Pecan Pie

1 9-inch pie shell
1 tbsp. unflavored gelatin
½ c. peach juice
½ c. peaches
1 tsp. vanilla

1 c. milk
2 egg yolks
½ c. sugar
¼ tsp. salt
2 egg whites

Soften gelatin in cold peach juice. Scald milk. Beat egg yolks slightly; add sugar and salt. Pour scalded milk gradually into egg mixture, stirring until blended. Cook in top of double boiler until of custard consistency. Remove from heat, add softened gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool. When mixture begins to thicken, fold in stiffly beaten egg whites, vanilla and chopped peaches. Pour into baked pie shell; chill until firm. Before serving, arrange slices of peach and a large pecan half in design on top of pie.

FRENCH PROBLEMS . . . Bread, fuel and shoes are greatest French needs. An adult is allowed a little over a half-pound of bread each day, while a French child is entitled to one-half litre, or less than a pint, of milk. Picture taken in the Village of Lagny.

French People Will Feel Effect Of War for Many Years to Come

By PAULINE FREDERICK
WNU Foreign Correspondent

PARIS.—It will take France a long time to get enough leather to walk on, clothes to wear, fuel to heat her houses, and food for her tables. And it will take her children, who have been growing up without enough vitamins and cod liver oil and oranges and milk, a long time to develop the sturdy bodies they will need to face the years ahead in this part of the world. The enemy has gone from France, but there is still a great battle to be won at home.

I was never more aware of the everyday living problems that confront the average French family than when I went to visit a home in Paris which is experiencing many of the typical troubles of the day.

It was bright and cold, so I was wearing my heavy lined field coat over my G.I. slacks and blouse. The car stopped in front of a modest stone front flush with the sidewalk. I was ushered through a hallway crowded with a baby carriage and a heavy dark chest. As I entered the living room, I might have been going into the room of a modest American home — simple but comfortable maple furniture, landscape watercolors on the walls, magazines on the table and books in the bookcase. But the thing that distinguished the room from that of American homes which I knew was that as I talked with the pretty dark-eyed hostess, our breaths were plainly visible. In my heavy G.I.s I was shivering.

Why didn't this gracious French woman light a fire or turn up the heat? There was one compelling reason. She and her family had only enough fuel to keep one room of the whole house moderately warm for six weeks between 10 o'clock in the morning and 5 o'clock in the afternoon. And there were not only the father and mother in that family, but three little children as well, aged 2, 7 and 11.

The middle child was threatened with tuberculosis, which has become one of the postwar prices France is paying. Three children who have known the deprivation of war years because their parents were not wealthy enough to pay black market prices, and also, because their mother happened to be a Jewess. Even now, the mother was selling one thing after another to get money to buy what she had to have for the mere existence of her family.

HOLDS BREAD . . . Pauline Frederick stopped to talk to this Frenchman about the price of bread.

First Sight of Paris Is a Shock Now

There is one thing I shall always remember about the first time I saw Paris. It was really something I heard rather than saw. Twenty-six hours after leaving the National airport at Washington, I was at Orly field just outside the French capital. It was early evening when I entered the city. There had been a government crisis and many people were in the streets. There was little vehicular traffic because of the gasoline shortage.

This is not an unusual story in France today. It can be repeated over and over again. Of course, there are modifications. I dined in a French farm house where there was meat and cheese and whipped cream on the table from the farm's resources, and trees that had been cut down on the broad acres surrounding the house provided the heat. But even so, the little boy of the house walked stiff-legged on his wooden soles, and looked the thin, high-colored age of four instead of his seven years because he had never had vitamins and cod liver oil and orange juice.

But back to the Family Jacques in Paris, as they shall be known, for they requested they remain anonymous.

Today the official price for basic commodities in France are 703 per cent higher than the 1939 rates, while black market prices have soared to 3,117 per cent above the prewar cost of living. Under these intolerable financial conditions which have not been alleviated by the devaluation of the franc because prices have gone up, and with the scarcity of the essential items of food, especially bread and potatoes which make up 60 per cent of the French diet, Madame Jacques is able to give her family only between 1,300 and 1,400 calories a day. Germans in the American zone are permitted 1,500 calories for the average consumer with more for the pregnant mother and heavy workers. Moreover, in the American sector of Berlin, housewives who take care of two or more persons who are too young or unable to work, have had their rations increased from 1,500 calories to 1,601. (The American army feeds its men between 3,500 and 4,000 calories a day.)

Ordinarily the Jacques family eats three pounds of bread a day for six (a maid lives with them). But the new ration has been reduced, with adults getting a little over a half pound a day. The children get milk — when milk is available — but only one-half or three-fourths litre each. Butter and fat are almost non-existent, except as friends from the country bring them in. There has been no fruit for the children. They have had about two pounds of tangerines since the war ended, but have never seen bananas. Last winter there were only carrots and leeks, but this winter there was a little salad and spinach. The meat ration is about one-third pound a week for each person.

Although M. Jacques earns about $2,000 a year, they cannot make ends meet. But Madame Jacques was anything but downcast.

"I know there are many people worse than we," she said. "I have an uncle in New York who helps us from time to time."

France, walking on wooden soles because for five long years she had been drained by her enemies within and without—drained of shoes and clothes and food and fuel. . . . There is the clatter of wooden soles on the streets of Paris today, and there is cold and hunger and sickness.

It will be some time before "Parce" can really be as gay in spirit as she may try to appear on the surface. The Nazis are gone, but the wooden clatter remains.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Credit for Army Schools

The Veterans' administration is completing arrangements with high schools, colleges and universities so that veterans may be given academic credit on diplomas and degrees for study and technical experience acquired during wartime service in the armed forces.

For this purpose VA is using as a guide a compendium of hundreds of educational and training studies given by the armed forces during the war compiled by the American Council on Education.

School authorities may consult this guide and obtain the recommended evaluation of courses taken from the U. S. Armed Forces Institute, or at one of the four overseas Army Study centers, or in any of the service technical schools, civil affairs training courses, etc.

For instance, a veteran who studied the history of philosophy at Biarritz American university in Biarritz, France, and is credited on his AGO form 100 with completion of the course, would be given by the guide's recommendation, 2½ hours toward a baccalaureate degree. In many instances sufficient credits have been earned so that a veteran forced to leave high school to enter the service, finds he may receive a high school diploma upon his return.

Questions and Answers

Q. My son received his discharge in September and the first six months in the army I didn't get my allotment or that for two minor children, one 13 and the other 8. Is there any way I can get this money?

—C. E. J., Halifax, N. C.

A. An allotment to parents is not compulsory and you could get it only if the amount was deducted from your son's pay. If the two minor children are your son's children they are entitled to the allotment which every serviceman is required to pay his dependent family. Suggest you write to Chief Finance Officer, Allotment Branch, Adjutant General's office, War Department, Washington, D. C., giving son's name, serial number and all other data.

Q. My cousin was killed in the Battle of the Bulge, December 25, 1944. I would like to know in what cemetery and in what town and country he is buried.—D. D., Pottsville, Pa.

A. Write to the Office of the Quartermaster General, Graves Registration, War Department, Washington 25, D. C., giving the veteran's name and serial number.

Q. I have a son who was inducted into the army in January, 1943, and was discharged the following March, 1943. Is he entitled to mustering-out pay and the G.I. Bill benefits?—Mrs. E. M. P., Decatur, Neb.

A. He is probably entitled to $200 mustering-out pay if he served 60 days in active service. He is not entitled to G.I. benefits unless he received a disability discharge, for this requires 90 days active service.

Q. I am the mother of a boy killed in action in 1944. He made me beneficiary for his insurance. I am 50 years old and get $52.80 monthly. Will I ever get any more monthly, and how soon?—Mrs. H. G., Sharon, Kan.

A. If the insurance is National Service Life and has not been converted there are two options for payment: (a) If the beneficiary is under 30 years of age at the date of death of the insured, payments are made in 240 equal monthly installments at the rate of $5.51 for each $1,000 of insurance. However, the beneficiary may elect to have the insurance payable in monthly installments as a refund life income, payable for a definite period and continuing throughout the life of the first beneficiary and in event of death of the first beneficiary the remaining installments, if any, paid to the second beneficiary or,

(b) If the beneficiary is 30 or more years of age payments are made in equal monthly installments throughout the remaining lifetime of such beneficiary with the proviso that such monthly installments shall be payable for 120 months certain. If you are not satisfied with your installments, suggest you write to Insurance Department, Veterans' Administration, at your regional office in Kansas City.

Q. My brother was killed in action in Germany, leaving a wife and one child. Several months ago her insurance checks stopped coming. We have written to find out why but have been unable to do so. Can you help us?—Mrs. J. H. R., Riddle, Ore.

A. The only suggestion I can make is that you contact, personally if possible, your nearest Veterans' administration regional offices, at the Veterans' hospital at Portland, and tell them the whole story and case history.

Sweet Potato Variety Good Starch Source

Large Yield Makes It A Profitable Farm Crop

By W. J. DRYDEN

The sweet potato is fast taking its place as the main source of starch. This is largely due to the fact that starch can be produced or extracted easily from sweet potatoes and of the large volume that can be produced per acre.

Starch and its derivatives are used in the production of almost every item of commerce — from cream puffs to dynamite. In the wastelands of the Florida Everglades, the United States Sugar corporation is carrying on vast operations in the producing and manufacture of sweet potato starch. They now have requirements for 40 freight cars of sweet potatoes daily.

Starch potato, right, and ordinary yam at left. The yam weighs a pound and a half, the starch potato weighs more than 7 pounds, some grow as much as 18 pounds.

The starch sweet potato is a special variety developed and tested for years. It grows as large as a man's head and contain a much higher starch content than the table varieties. The yields are from 500 to 700 bushels per acre.

By-products are also important. Pulp stock-feed production as well as the vines for livestock feed have high nutritive value. The waste water is decomposed and gas used in power plant, the solids producing a high quality fertilizer.

Not only for Florida, but other sections where climate and soil production is suitable, this industry will prove of increasing interest and value to farmers. It has proved financially sound and the need for this quality starch is ever increasing.

Improved Machinery Picking Machines

Feather picker, for big production work, improves quality.

This automatic rubber finger picking machine will remove many of the feathers from the birds after they pass out of the scalders; it is a product of E. J. Albright company, Chicago.

The square, semi-soft gum rubber fingers lay flat against the carcass in pulling feathers. It is sturdy enough to stand continuous usage and operated with a one h.p. motor.

Bloat Superstitions Fallen by Wayside

Many of the old notions about bloat have fallen by the wayside, in the wake of recent research, according to the American Veterinary medical association. For example, bloat in sheep and cattle results from greater accumulation, not excessive production, of gases. Exploded also is the theory that alfalfa, clover and other legumes are more inclined to generate gases within an animal than the common pasture grasses.

Also head for the discard is the belief that death is caused by intense pressures exerted by gases within the paunch. Instead, scientific research shows that it is practically impossible to kill animals through such pressure. Of the five principal gases generated within the paunch, carbon monoxide and hydrogen sulfide are the two with poisonous properties. Even slightly increased quantities of either, at time of bloating, is sufficient to cause death, which probably results from distention of the paunch walls.

Embroidered Pansies

EMBROIDERED pansies make a handsome design on pale green, lavender, delicate pink or white organdy or linen luncheon cloths. They can be used effectively on linen guest towels, too. Five pansy baskets and eight smaller sprays are included in the transfer pattern.

To obtain transfer designs for the Pansy Bouquets (Pattern No. 5087) color chart for embroidering, amounts of all colors and materials specified, send 20 cents in coin, your name, address and the pattern number.

Crocheted Doilies

HERE are two of the most popular crocheted doilies you've ever put a hook into. The 13-inch "pansy" doily has one-inch pansies done in shaded purple and lavender thread. The lacy pineapple doily comes from a reader in Akron, Ohio, and is a beauty. It is 20 inches in diameter.

To obtain crocheting instructions for Pansy Doily (Pattern No. 5711) and the Pineapple Doily (Pattern No. 5806) send 20 cents in coin, for each pattern, your name, address and the pattern number.
